In Obtaining a Divorce at Naples. She Tells Story of Her Wrongs and Also Learns That Her Husband is an Ex-Convict.

Naples, Italy, Nov. 9.—The Countess di Castelmenardo, who was Miss Edith Van Buren of New York., has obtained a legal separation from her supposedly titled husband. The beautiful countess appeared in the court of appeals here and testified to her husband's cruelly and rapacity.

It then became known publicly for the first time that the court's title was bogus when he married her the same at the last session made him a leading figure on the Pacific coast.

the countess received a frightful shock when the chief of police of Naples testified that the man with whom she mated had undergone penal servitude and is still subject to police surveillance.

"The man's name is Gennaro Vessichio," said the chief of police.

In emphasizing her demand for separation the countess testified that her husband represented himself to be Count Vesschio Georgo di Castelmenardo. After their bethrothal she received from Naples—probably from a confederate of hisexcellent testimonials respecting her husband's family. She was assured that his mother was the Duchess di Belvidere Gludditta Georga di Castelmenardo and that the count was beyond reproach.

HER FAMILY MOVED OFTEN TO AVOID HIM

City and Finally Enacted a Tragedy Which Ended Her Life-Gave Himself Up.

New York, Nov. 9.—After pursuing her with unwelcome attentions for ten years, Joseph Schmillowitz, a cabinet maker of Cleveland, Ohio, today shot and killed Mrs. Dora Stebel in the presence of her two children in Brooklyn. Before her marriage Mrs. Stebel is said to have accepted Schmillowitz's attentions as a sultor. For ten years he has been constantly writing her and had so persisted in his anoyances that the woman, with her husband, had been compelled to fice from Philadelphia to Boston and thence to Brooklyn in hope of cluding him. Schmillowitz submitted to arrest saying:

saying:
"It is a life for a life with me.
I don't care what happens to me

I don't care what happens to me now."

Followed Her to Brooklyn.

After being compelled by the unwelcome attentions and threats of Schmilowitz to leave Cleveland, the Stebel family moved to Philadelphia where for a time they were not bothered by his attentions, but he finally traced them through letters to mutual friends, and again took up his correspondence with Mrs. Stebel. She refused to answer his letters and his attentions finally became so violent that she besought her husband to again flee, and without notifying anyone of their intentions, they went to Boston.

In a few weeks after they arrived in that city, scambowitz found their address, coming to Boston after he discovered their flight from Philadelphia. He learned their whereabouts from a description which he furnished to the stallon agent from whom they bought their tickets, he alleging that he was scarching for them on a criminal charge.

They Flee Again.

When the wife learned of his presence in the city, she besought her husband again to leave and so imbued had he become with the idea that Schmilowitz ment harm to his wife, he immediately consented to the removal and they quietly went to Brooklyn.

The children ran screaming into the street and when neighbors, attracted by the sound of the shots, arrived with an officer, they found Schmilowitz calmly sitting beside a table with his revolver by his side, looking at his victim with no concern whatever.

The Stebel family had become popular during their residence here and threats of lynching are freely made. The slayer is being closely guarded, and a mob would be unable to reach him.

Denver, Colo., Nov. 9.—William R. Mason and Joseph VanDerweide, accused of the murder of Joseph Walker, secret service agent of the government, who was shot and killed by VanDerweide at the Hesperus coal mine last Sunday, were admitted to bail in the sum of rwenty thousand dellars each by Judge Pike in the district court today, over the protest of District Attorney Pulliam. In support of the motion for ball, affidavits were submitted from Mason and VanDerweide affirming that Walker fired first and that the shooting was done in self defense.

Still Investigating.

Durango, Colo., Nov. 9.—For the time being government officials investigating the shooting of Agent Walker will not attempt to participate in the prosecution of Mason and VanDerweide, further than to gather evidence against them. The idea that others were involved has not been abandoned and may lead to additional charges being preferred later on. A part of the federal officials will start for Denver tomorrow, leaving some here to work on the case.

Sheriff John Clark tried on Walker's coat today at the undertaker's, before the federal officers and State District Attorney Pulliam. The bullet holes in it were in the back. Two let holes in it were in the back. Two had pierced the coat collar back of the left car, one was only an inch from the spinal cord and two others from the spinal cord and two others were located on the left gide of the back, lower down. The theory of the prosecution is that he had had a discussion with the two men and had turned partly away from them to walk toward the shaft when shot. The theory that Walker was asleep when shot seems improbable. The build wounds entered the hody at

No Reason for Killing.
District Attorney Pulliam believes that there was actually no occasion for the killing of Walker.

"Walker was not destroying property, or in any way injuring it," he said. "He was simply there to make observations, to which the company's officers had said they had no objection, and as Mason must have known that Walker and his companions were there for, he had no business to go to the air shaft. Even if it were conceded that Walker was trespassing, the penalty for that offense is not death, and he and VanDerweide were not in any danger of their lives."
